

Olea europaea (European Olive) –

This small to medium size low fruiting tree has slender, greyish-green leaves with a silvery underside. It is a relatively slow grower but is considered very tough, and can tolerate periods of dryness. The bark is grey in colour and although it does produce white flowers in Spring, they are generally sterile, therefore it will produce little fruit.